REPORT: GROUP MOBILITY OF PUPILS ENGUERA, SPAIN FRIDAY 27TH MARCH 2026 MORNING

Monika Pavlíková 7.D

Silvia (Leonora's mother) woke Leonora and me up in the morning, boiled hot water and I poured it over the powdered porridge. Then Silvia took us to the bakery, where we bought a snack, and then she drove us to school.

This morning we were supposed to go on a walking trip to the Enguera castle ruins. We walked through the village for a while, then we entered the forest, went up the stairs and found ourselves on a forest path. From there we saw the castle called in Spanish language "Castillo de Enguera".

Enguera".

To get to it, we had to climb a rocky slope, which was quite steep, but there were paths on it and the climbing was fun. I enjoyed the whole journey and we always had beautiful views. We also saw a rope bridge hanging between two hills which a part of ferrata there.

We just continued along another beautiful forest path. When we reached another, this time a gravel path, we were noticeably closer to the ruins.

We stopped for a snack at a couple of dilapidated tables just before the finish line. When we reached the ruins, we had beautiful views from all sides.

The Enguera castle was probably built in the 11th or 12th century. These ruins can most likely be considered Muslims. One of our teachers was waiting for us below the final top and on the way back we reconnected with her.

On the way down, we also saw our Spanish school in the village of Enguera. From above it looked almost like a swimming pool. We recognized it thanks to the blue colour of the school playground. During the trip, we also let our teachers try on purple sunglasses and they looked great and cool. We let one Spanish student try them on too.

We tried to teach one of the Spanish students, how to say one Czech word "peníze". Than we got used to calling him "Adrian peníze" and he kept repeating it, it was quite funny.

At the end of the return journey we went along the wide road and finally we went for lunch in the school, which was probably the best lunch we had there. I really enjoyed the whole trip and there were lots of beautiful flowers growing there.
