MY SPANISH HOST FAMILY

In my host family in Enguera there was my host Martina, her mother Silvia and her father José. Martina has a brother, but he wasn't at home because he was in France on Erasmus.

Her mother is a beautician and her father is a bulldozer operator. Her mother was very friendly and clever and she did her clients' make-up at home every day and for one of them she even had to get up at 5 o'clock am to do her make-up for her wedding,

I didn't see Martina's father at home much but when he was there he made very good food for dinner for example, he once made me really good pasta or fish. He didn't speak English and when he said he was an Englishman and he said good morning in German we all laughed. There was a cousin in her family who spoke perfect English and helped us a lot of with translating everything, I wanted. I think her name was also Silvia and she was a student.

Martina had a really big family that I had an opportunity to meet at a family celebration and I can tell you that some of them are really crazy, for example Silvia's brother, at a celebration told me he wanted to be a forester in the Czech Republic and he danced with his grandmother as if she was 20 and he was 20 years older. I tasted their typical paella dish at her family's house, which I didn't like very much.

At Martina's house, I was with her in a room where she had a bunk bed, but I had my own dressing room where I could do my make-up, get dressed and call my friends and parents. They had a two-story house right next to the school, and next to our house there were neighbours who gave us lemons, which were very nice. At their house there were two entrances, one with a regular door and the other on the other side of the garage, and we went there much more often.

Martina's parents had three cars, one was mom's and two were dad's. Martina and I went to school alone because we really only had a little bit of a walk. Martina also had an aunt who would sometimes pick us up from school and take us to the badminton that Martina played, she could play the saxophone, and went to church.

They had two dogs that I unfortunately didn't see them because they had them in another house and I wasn't there. It was very nice with them and I felt very comfortable with them.
