My Spanish host family

My host family was very kind and welcoming. From the first day, I felt comfortable in their house. I am very grateful that I had the opportunity to stay with them.

In the house lived my host parents and their daughter Lucia. She also has a brother, but he does not live at home anymore. Their family is quite big, and many relatives live close to each other in the same city. I found this very interesting because in my country families are often more separated.

Only Lucia and her mother spoke English, but they always tried to help me and explain things when I did not understand. Sometimes we used simple words or gestures, but communication was never a big problem.

They introduced me to almost the whole family because everyone was curious to meet me. I met the grandmother, and we had lunch together. Her sister lives in the apartment below her, and they even talk to each other through the window. I found this both funny and nice.

The grandmother had many family photos at home. Lucia showed me her cousins and explained who everyone was. It was clear that family is very important to them.

I am happy to have such a family...

Saturday 7th February with my host family

On Saturday, we woke up around eleven in the morning. For breakfast, we had milk and crisps, which was unusual for me, but I wanted to try everything.

Later, we got ready because we had planned a family lunch in Murcia. We left at around one in the afternoon. The journey took about thirty minutes.

We went to an Italian restaurant, and Lucia's older brother and his girlfriend joined us. They were very friendly and made me feel welcome. Before the main course, we ordered appetizers to share. Then everyone chose something different for lunch.

After the meal, we went to a pastry shop. My host parents had coffee, and we bought croissants. Later, we walked around the city and bought some souvenirs. The atmosphere in Murcia was very nice and lively.

Around eight in the evening, I went home with my host parents because I needed to pack and prepare for the trip. Lucia stayed in the city with her friends.

At home, I had dinner and talked with my host mother about my stay in Spain. Later, Lucia came home and we talked for a while too. Then I did my evening routine and went to bed early because I had to wake up early the next morning.
